

School In The Middle Of Nowhere Out

A request by the North York Board of Education to start preliminary work on Westview Secondary School was turned down by the Board of Control.

In recommending the Works Committee report to Council, the Board adopted the criteria as laid out by the township engineer. The proposed school is on an undeveloped site south of Finch Avenue and west of Jane Street.

The superintendent of planning for the Board of Education said in a communication that the owner of the surrounding land, Morris Freedman, might be willing to service the land before commencing development. The report of the engineer stated however that the township could not be involved in such a deal and further noted, that as far as the township was concerned the school site "was in the middle of nowhere."

It was also noted that a building permit could not be issued as the school had no frontage on a dedicated road allowance.
